MESSAGE

I am glad to extend my heartfelt greetings to the Department of Computer Science & Engineering on the occasion of its annual function, celebrating the Freshers' Welcome, Farewell, and Reunion on the 22nd and 23rd of February 2025. They will also bring out a Magazine named "Voyage" on this very pleasant occasion.

The name of the departmental magazine, Voyage, is truly symbolic of the academic and professional journey that each student embarks upon. The Department of Computer Science & Engineering has been at the forefront of technological advancements, fostering excellence in education, research and innovation. I am confident that the students and faculty will continue to uphold this legacy and make remarkable contributions to society.

To the freshers, I extend a warm welcome to this vibrant academic community. May you make the most of the opportunities that come your way and strive for excellence in all your endeavors. As you step into the next phase of your journey, carry forward the knowledge, skills and values you have acquired here. To the alumni, your achievements and contributions serve as a beacon of inspiration for your juniors, and we take great pride in your success.

I convey my best wishes to all the students, faculty members, and alumni. May this celebration inspire you to strive for excellence and strengthen the bonds of camaraderie and knowledge-sharing.

Acknowledgement

We are delighted to present our departmental magazine "Voyage" for the year 2025. This magazine, along with our annual voyage program, would not have been possible without the unwavering support and guidance of our dedicated faculty, whose contributions have been invaluable. We also extend our sincere gratitude to all the students for their enthusiastic participation and meaningful contributions to this publication—your efforts are greatly appreciated.

We hope that "Voyage" resonates with the entire KUCSE family, inspiring readers to share their innovative ideas and express their creative spirit. May this magazine serve as a beacon of inspiration, opening new avenues for dialogue and growth within our community.

About Our Department

The Department of Computer Science and Engineering is relatively new compared to other departments in the University, having been established in 1992.

It initially offered a Postgraduate Diploma in Computer Applications (PGDCA) course and in the upcoming years, began offering MCA and M.Tech courses (from 2001 and 2003 respectively).

The Department has since expanded to offer PhD, B.Tech (CSE), MSc (Data Sc.), and MSc (Comp. Sc.) courses in its renovated premises. It features three computer labs equipped with modern systems and networking capabilities, a VLSI laboratory, and other facilities, along with smart classrooms for effective teaching.

The Department organizes several seminars, workshops, and events throughout the year, including "Voyage" - the annual departmental reunion, freshers, and farewell event. Voyage is a vibrant celebration that fosters connections, rekindles memories, and showcases the various talents among the students.

The Department is committed to providing quality higher education and exploring new horizons in the field of computer science - and we, the students, are grateful to be a part of it.

Window

She doesn't know
How it feels
To have her own space in a house,
House that is made up of four walls of cement and bricks,
A house that is close to a home
And a forever chaos there sticks.

House but not a home, not a nest to weather,
They are together, yet apart forever.

Melancholy

Autumn

Where the last leaf of a tree don't yet falls
To feel the warmth of spring in each and every pulse

She needs her own corner
To cry and to laugh
In her dreams.

She needs her own terrace ,
or perhaps a balcony
For raindrops to touch her tears
And a curtain , translucent and thin
For sunrays to enter but hide her shadow
She needs a world of her own .

A tiny room
With plants in the window
Where she can breathe
And gaze the stars
Away from the mess down the floor.

Quantum Computing

Ankit Sen
BTech 3rd Year

Quantum computing represents one of the biggest breakthroughs that humankind has achieved in the field of computation. A quantum computer possesses far greater potential than a classical computer. However, based on recent technological advancements and current scientific understanding, the resources required to make quantum computers widely accessible are still lacking. This is primarily because quantum computers require extremely cold temperatures, complex machinery, and other physical constraints to function properly. Even small fluctuations in temperature can lead to errors due to effects like "quantum decoherence".

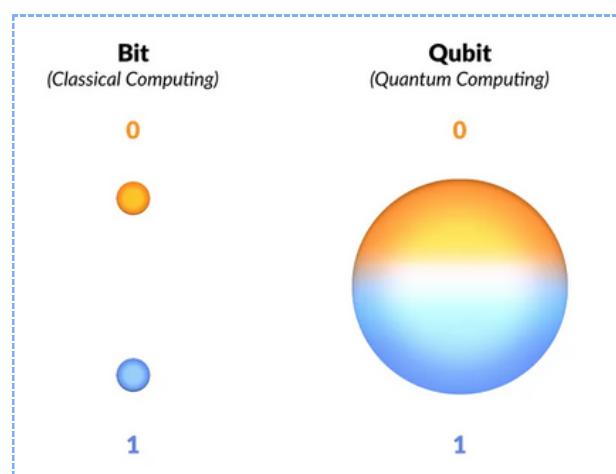

So, what is the basic unit of a quantum computer? (In a classical computer, it's a bit, which can either be 0 or 1, representing a high or low state at any given moment.) The basic unit of a quantum computer is called a QUBIT. A qubit can exist in a state of 0, 1, or both simultaneously. To illustrate this, imagine a qubit as an arrow inside a circle. If the arrow is pointing upward, it indicates 0; if it's pointing downward, it represents 1. If the arrow is between the two directions, it represents a superposition state, meaning it has a certain probability of being 0 and a certain probability of being 1. For example, it could be 80% 0 and 20% 1. A key characteristic of quantum computers is that their computational power grows exponentially with each added qubit.

Another important property is entanglement, where the state of one qubit can affect the state of another, even if they are far apart. To determine the state of a qubit we use probability distribution to calculate the most-likely state. In the property of interference in quantum computing, we use destructive interference to reduce the probability of incorrect answers and constructive interference to increase the probability of correct answers. Quantum algorithms are used for this purpose.

One prominent example is Shor's Algorithm, a quantum algorithm that can solve the integer factorization problem in polynomial time. In contrast, a classical computer would take exponential time to solve the same problem. Integer factorization is a fundamental part of many encryption schemes - which are used to protect bank accounts, data, and more. However, there is no immediate cause for concern, as no quantum computer can currently run Shor's algorithm effectively.

To illustrate how fast quantum computers can be, we can consider the problem of finding the shortest path from a source to a destination. A classical computer can process only one path at a time, while a quantum computer can process multiple paths simultaneously, leading to a much faster solution.

Article

However, quantum and classical computers are computationally equivalent in the sense that both can solve all computable problems. For example, the Halting Problem cannot be solved by any Turing machine, classical or quantum, as it is undecidable.

One of the recent breakthroughs in the field of quantum computing was made by Google in 2024. Google created a quantum computer named Willow, which solved a benchmark problem called Random Circuit Sampling in just 5 minutes. For comparison, the world's fastest supercomputer would take  $10^{25}$  years to solve that problem. For the first time, Willow demonstrated real-time error correction on a superconducting quantum system — a crucial step for any useful computation, as errors can ruin a computation if they aren't corrected quickly.

Quantum computers have the potential to revolutionize diverse fields such as medicine, material design, understanding the origins of the universe, designing efficient batteries, optimizing machine learning models, and minimizing loss functions in AI.

Code like a Pilot : Lessons from Space & Aviation

Software engineering often does not have the strict requirements of fields like aviation or space exploration, where errors can have life-or-death consequences. While a software bug might cause inconvenience, it rarely leads to loss of life. This lower-stakes environment can sometimes lead to complacency. But what if we approached software development with the same rigor demanded in those high-stakes industries? Can we build more robust, reliable software by learning from them?

Just as pilots follow rigorous_checklists before every flight to ensure all systems function properly, software development should start with well-defined requirements. NASA's Software Assurance and Software Safety Standard promotes a structured approach—capturing detailed requirements, setting clear objectives, and considering the full software lifecycle. This isn't bureaucracy; it's laying a solid foundation on which complex systems can be built.

Think about an aircraft cockpit: every instrument is logically placed among its neighbours and easily accessible, contributing to situational awareness. In software, we can achieve this through modular architecture. Developing code as loosely coupled modules improves maintainability and reduces errors. The Joint Strike Fighter Air Vehicle C++ Coding Standards, developed by Lockheed Martin for what would become the F-35 jet, emphasize reusable components to reduce redundancy and provide guidelines for writing organized, consistent code. Object-oriented design principles can help us embody the principles of reducing coupling and maintaining cohesion, and namespaces can prevent naming clashes and ambiguity in large codebases.

Farhan Rahaman
BTech 3rd Year

Pilots rely on standardized instruments to be able to provide critical information and context at a glance. Similarly, coding should adhere to strict standards for readability and error prevention. Following coding guidelines, like those in the JSF Air Vehicle C++ or ESA C and C++ Coding Standards can help in this regard. Clear and strategic comments, consistent formatting (limiting line length and maintaining indentation), are essential for readability. These details significantly impact a developer's ability to understand, traverse and maintain the code. Limiting function size, as suggested by NASA JPL's "Power of 10" rules, can also improve this.

Modern aircraft use autopilots. Similarly, in software development, automated tools manage code complexity. Reducing cyclomatic complexity, which measures independent paths through a program, can improve reliability and testability. Just as pilots are rigorously trained to handle unexpected issues, software must be equally resilient. Implementing defensive programming checks and error handling is crucial. While some standards (like the Joint Strike Fighter standards) recommend avoiding C++ exceptions due to tool limitations, the principle remains: code should return to a known safe state. Moreover, initializing software to a known safe state is also a fundamental requirement.

The landing gear is crucial for a safe arrival; similarly, rigorous testing can help verify how reliable a piece of software is. Using static analysis tools to detect defects and ensure code quality - as NASA requires, measuring code coverage, and independently verifying software requirements that trace to hazardous events can be invaluable.

Just as pilots review performance after each flight, software development should involve continuous improvement through peer reviews and feedback. Performing peer reviews and addressing findings (as NASA recognizes), and conducting root cause analysis for high-severity issues, are essential steps in preventing future problems.

In essence, "coding like a pilot" means embracing rigor, discipline, and a commitment to safety, reliability and software maintainability. It involves lots of planning, implementing modular design, adherence to standards, robust fault handling, thorough testing and constant review. By adopting these principles, we can elevate the quality of the software we build, ensuring it performs reliably – just as pilots strive to ensure passenger safety.

So, next time you're coding, ask yourself: What would a pilot do?

The "Power of 10" Rules

Originally developed at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, these guidelines, while designed primarily for C — serve as a framework for writing reliable, mission critical code.

- 1 . Avoid complex control structures like goto and recursion.
- 2 . Ensure all loops have fixed bounds to prevent infinite execution.
- 3 . Do not use dynamic heap memory allocation.
- 4 . Keep functions short—no longer than a single printed page.
- 5 . Include at least two runtime assertions per function.
- 6 . Minimize the scope of variables and data.
- 7 . Always check return values of non-void functions or explicitly discard them.
- 8 . Use the preprocessor only when absolutely necessary.
- 9 . Restrict pointer use to a single dereference and avoid function pointers.
- 10 . Enable all compiler warnings and resolve them before releasing the software.

Whispers in the Void

The hopeless siren
Rings in my head,
Whispering your presence
In my thoughtless hope.
In a heart full of sorrow and strangeness,
You emerge, sweet and sugary.

Am I the only one here,
Or are there hundreds seeking penance,
For painting colors so enigmatically
Across this misty, clouded atmosphere,
Where horizons rise to meet the unknown?

Truth never lies,
But lies often wear truth's mask.
The shallow waters
Seem a boundless ocean,
Yet now, that vastness feels hollow.

My consciousness drifts and falters,
But it must never dissolve into void.

জানি তোমার বয়স হয়েছে
তাই করো তুমি খিটখিট...
আমি যাই করি না কেনো
তাতেই তোমার কেন পিটপিট....

কার পোলা.....কার মাইয়া কি করুম
সেটি তুমি দেখছো....
তোমার নাতি কি করিছে
সে খবর কি শেকছো...

ইঞ্জিনিয়ার রা কি করেছে
এই বলে চাপো লিফটে...

অভিমানী

হৃদয়ে জমিয়ে রাখা টুকরো টুকরো ব্যাথা গুলো
হৃদয়ের স্তন্ধতায়, না বলে সে চলে গেল।
অনেক খুঁজেছে আমায় সমুদ্রের নিরন্ত জলে,
হারিয়ে ফেলেছে আমায় আকাশের দিগন্ত নীলে।
উড়ে গেছ তোমারা আজি আনন্দের ডানা মেলে,
চলে গেছে সকলেই, শুধু আমাকে ছাড়া তুমি একা হয়ে ছিলে ।
স্বপ্নকে সামনে রেখে, কেন তুমি আজও আমায় দেখ?
সবশেষেও কেন তুমি আমায় নিয়ে গল্প লেখ?
আর ভাবিনা তোমায়, করেছ তুমি মানা।
তবু আজও কেন ডাকাতের মতো তোমার বুকে দিচ্ছ হানা!
পারিনি হতে চন্দ, তাইতো হয়েছি ছোট্টো তারা,
কেন তবু তোমার চোখে ভাসে এই চেহারা?
চলে যাও দুরে, যদি ভালবাসা নাই থাকে!
ফিরে এসো আবার, যদি আমায় ছাড়া বেসুরো লাগে।
চাইনে কিছু আজ, চাই শুধু সে সুখে চলে যাক।
আর চাইনে তাকে, কেবল তার স্মৃতি আমার মনে থাক।
সেই না বলা তার কথা গুলো—
নীল দিগন্ত পেরিয়ে আজি আমার কাছে ভেসে এলো।
সবশেষেও, শুরু থেকে কিছু ভুলিনিতো আমি।
শুধু চলে গেছ তুমি, হয়ে অভিমানী!"
